

Communication Intern

The internship at the National Center for APEC (NCAPEC) provides opportunities for researching APEC and related trade issues, investigating the implications of economic integration around the Pacific Rim, and keeping current with the interests and concerns of local and national business groups.

Interns play a vital role in the organization and execution of conferences and meetings hosted by the National Center for APEC. Interns are also exposed to the process of U.S. - APEC policy formation.

While interns are expected to perform daily administrative tasks, there are opportunities to work on long term projects, depending on the changing needs of the organization. Interns at NCAPEC have the opportunity to develop their written and oral communication skills and their knowledge of general office procedures.
