LOOKING

will play a pivotal role in addressing cutting-edge issues that will affect the Asia-Pacific region over the next decade. From digital trade and finance to women's empowerment and infrastructure, APEC officials will hone their focus on emerging policy issues that will impact business and society in this rapidly-changing region.

NCAPEC has helped companies influence APEC's work and agenda, including on emerging and sensitive policy issues. Through its relationships with APEC officials and economies, NCAPEC has played a leading role advancing the private sector's interests on digital trade policy, health, mining, and other key policy areas. From developing in-depth reports to creating unique speaking opportunities before APEC Leaders, NCAPEC has helped members leverage APEC to advance their companies' goals.

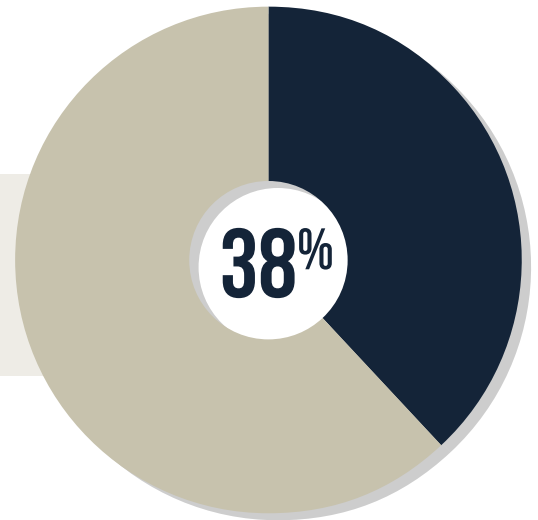

Over the next five years, APEC will be hosted by Papua New Guinea (2018), Chile (2019), Malaysia (2020), New Zealand (2021), and Thailand (2022). These vastly different economies will set the scene for APEC dialogues focused on a range of issues – from trade and investment to tourism and sustainability. These dialogues offer an array of opportunities for U.S. and foreign companies to engage with officials through the APEC process and to share their perspectives and recommendations with senior government officials. NCAPEC will play a leading role in connecting its member companies with these opportunities and advocating on behalf of companies in 2018 and beyond.
